

<http://www.filmschoolrejects.com/features/this-week-in-dvd-february-23rd.php>

I Am Virgin

Pitch: “I love the smell of vinegar in the evening. It reminds me of my virginity...”

Why Avoid? This cheap little flick from Portland filmmakers gets at least two things right that Lesbian Vampire Killers got wrong. A bevy of naked and frisky lady vampires make it sexier, and lines like the one above (and their delivery by Adam Davis) make it funnier too. But despite its charms, the ultra low-budget is impossible to ignore. A severe lack of professional actors, a non-existent effects budget, some sketchy ADR work, and absolutely terrible lighting make it difficult to watch. It does its best to distract you from those negatives with several fairly lengthy, somewhat explicit, and oddly out of place scenes of vampire fornication, but as it stands this one is reserved for really big fans of the genre, even bigger supporters of indie cinema, and folks who like their softcore porn to have some bite to it.

Blu-ray? No

Extra Features? Commentary, featurette

