The Style Council/Little Steven/Cutting Crew Live at Full House Rock Show

ARD Video

German shows for worldwide stars caught on tape...

Style Council may have the hits (and were more of a UK success than Little Steven or Cutting Crew), but live they seem somewhat motionless, Weller still in his awkward phase provides no sense of excitement, nor do the band possess the songs to pull off a headline show when compared to the all out assault of a Jam show. Little Steven's solo career has been more of a curious one, finding a niche amongst Bruce Springsteen fans desperate for anything Springsteen/E-Street band related, it wasn't until his role in the Soprano's that he proved to be an artist of worth in his own right. As for the Cutting Crew, they make me want to use my arms to throttle and finish the job off after their worldwide hit 'I Just Died In Your Arms', was 80's pop really this bad? Though none of the bands featured are particularly well known as live bands, a fan will find great comfort in seeing these now, sadly defunct bands playing their hit in their heydays. For those curious viewers, it might be better to just stick to the greatest hits packages!
