Every Other Day Is Halloween (2009)

Directed By: C.W. Prather

The 70's! Pet Rocks, Foghat, and huge jungles of pubic hair...Speaking of Count Gore De Vol, let me just tell you I've seen this wonderful new documentary about to be released on DVD officially through MVD Distributors. It's called "Every Other Day is Halloween" and it's a nostalgic look back at one of the greatest regional television horror hosts of all time, Washington D.C.'s Count Gore De Vol. Gore was brought to life by the great Dick Dyszel. He developed the host after being on the air in D.C previously as Bozo The Clown, and the infamous childrens show host, Captain 20.

Dysel, was searching for an adult format where he could stretch his chops and have fun. Count Gore De Vol was a weekly program that featured notoriously bad B movies, and most horror host fans admit, that they tuned in more for the antics of Gore De Vol, then the actual movie itself. De Vol did have a stretching influence on several of the newer horror hosts that are doing well in the hosting renaissance that we all hope would just go mainstream, and move away from the internet. The film pays special attention to local musicians, and comic book persona Steve Niles, who wrote the "30 Days Of Night" series, whom Dyszel influenced greatly.

The film is beautifully directed and paced well, and really wants to make you a fan of De Vol, even if you didn't grow up with him. It's a wonderful look back at 70s culture, and as with most of us, if we love something, we never forget it. It's a sign of true fandom. Dyszel seems like he's probably the nicest guy you'll ever meet, and that says a lot about the lasting power of the character he created. Not growing up in the D.C. area, I am familiar with Count Gore De Vol, as in last 10 years, I discovered his shows via his website www.countgore.com. He's an engaging character actor, and is easily one of the top 10 horror hosts of all time. Every Other Day Is Halloween comes out via DVD on April 20th, 2010. Pick it up immediately. I'm gonna go watch this again, while I lay in my coffin and stare at Vampirella!
