

New Morning (The Paris Concert) [DVD]

Stanley Jordan Trio (inakustik)

Employing a percussive two-handed tapping technique, completely beyond the faculties of most guitarists, of pull-offs and hammer-ons that require an alternate tuning on a custom guitar to properly execute, Stanley Jordan manages to both inflame and soothe the mind with his inventive interpretations of modern and classic repertory. Strolling through the likes of The Beatles, Mozart, and Coltrane, Jordan and his capable Trio show off their impressive range as jazz and fusion musicians. Beginning his music career as a classically trained pianist, his live show features instances of him playing both guitar and piano at once, using each instrument as a counterpoint to the other. Even while playing guitar alone, you get the sense Jordan still thinks he's on a piano with that wild technique. Guitar junkies, pay attention! This guy is the real deal – one of the most inventive and incredible virtuosos on six strings. Edward Van...who?
