CD Review: Diabolic Inventions And Seduction For Solo Guitar by Al Di Meola

October 22nd, 2007 by zzsimonb

Mike Kuykendall

It was with trepidation that I popped this one in the player. The title conjured up ideas of more heavy metal, and I am still recovering from my last bout. I suspect that heavy metal was a contributing factor in my stroke!

Lefty political commentary from a dreadlocked patriot. I had really been worried about Al Di Meola is a classical/trained/acoustic guitarist who specializes in Jazz Fusion. He may be best known for his time playing with Chick Corea back in the mid 70's, but he has had a very fruitful career after their break up in 1976.

This is an absolutely delightful album consisting of Al and a great sounding acoustic guitar. Although he is normally very Jazz influenced, I found that this album leaned much more to classical and occasionally flamenco styles.

If you are looking for some easy going and superbly relaxing guitar, with just a hint of some backing percussion, this is one that you should seek out. It is available from MVD.
