DVD Review: Dancing In The Street

January 31st, 2008 by Simon Barrett

Formed in 1959 the Motown brand quickly became a staple in the American popular music scene. Other labels tried to imitate the sound, but none could quite meet the rich soul that emanated from Detroit. Motown provided not only entertainment for the listener, but was also the inspiration for many up and coming musicians of the time. It might surprise you for example, to learn that Paul Simon lists Motown as one of the greatest influences in his career.

Dancing In The Street is actually archival footage from a concert given in the Great Western Forum in Los Angeles in 1987. It was one stop on a tour. This previously unreleased video contains the that known as the one you know knock up. When you combine the number of hits that these four artists you get a staggering answer, over 100! And when you consider the Motown represented, you start to realize just how huge the label had.

In true Motown style, there is no 'headliner' in this concert, it is a steady flow of artists who all put on highly polished performances. The list of performers is compendious, and in total 25 tracks have included, 12 of which were #1 billboard hits.

A quick summary, Mary Wells sings My Guy, and My Guy. Martha Reeves sings Jimmy Mack and Heat Wave. David Ruffin & Eddie Kendricks (Part of the Temptations) offer up Just My Imagination and Statue Of A Fool.

This is a must have for any Motown fan.
