

www.CreateSpace.com

Indie Musicians: Sell Your Music On-Demand
with Our Free Tools. Get Started.
No Setup Fees and No Inventory Required.

Feedback - Ads by Google

home bands labels reviews interviews features photos news contests concert calendar merch about

Search

ChineseLoveLinks.com

The International Chinese Dating Site!

Browse Photos Now!

JOIN FREE!

www.ChineseLoveLinks.com
Ads by Goooooogle

Download on iTunes

The Mars Volta
New Album + Ticketmaster Offer

» 16 Days In China
(Invisible Records 2008)

★ buy it!

In just over the hour it takes to watch "16 Days In China," you get unprecedented footage of British musician and producer Martin Atkins playing drums, eyeing Chinese bands and blowing his top. In fact, there should probably be an accompanying drinking game: take a shot every time Atkins loses his cool. Or just hook an IV up, it will be kinder on your wrists. But experience with Public Image Ltd., Pigface, Nine Inch Nails and others under his belt, Atkins obviously could care less.

Rapid fire, cartoony and loosely woven together, "16 Days In China" can be hard to follow. The documentary leaves out key details, such as a clear definition of the plot. Long story short- Atkins and an assistant he hired off MySpace take to Beijing in late 2006 with two tasks: sign bands to his record label and record Atkins' dub experiment album. The latter gets less screen time but a scene of a Chinese DJ mashing Atkins' drumming with traditional Chinese and Tibetan sounds and instruments is fascinating.

The main focus is, in fact, on the bands that make up the Beijing underground, specifically playing at a club called D-22. Embodying the spirit of the now gone CBGB's, as Atkins states, D-22 plays home to creative and unique Chinese bands. Performances with bands like Subs, Tookoo, Carsick Cars, PK-14 and others show that this scene isn't just punk, indie or artsy; there seems to be a band for every musical taste.

Here and there between segments, Atkins makes some heavy-handed references to politics, such as the Chinese government preempting a CNN report on a shooting in Tibet. Other times he insults the audience's intelligence for not realizing a quick clip they set up as the border crossing is actually a tollbooth (why we'd assume it's a border crossing when he's flying directly to Beijing is unclear). Not to mention with the Cultural Revolution artwork displayed so prominently as the cover art and discussed during the film, it was disappointing the film didn't include the opinions of the bands on how they're affected by their country's politics and culture.

"16 Days In China" is the perfect foot in the door giving you glimpses at a talented music scene you otherwise might be unaware of. Luckily the film drops enough names to provide a nice jumping off point.

B

★ buy it!

-Corinne

16 Days In China

Official Website

DVD Reviews

16 Days In China

NEWS

- Over The Rhine Celebrates 20th Anniversary
- Enforcer Preview Upcoming Album
- Hollywood Undead Rule The Road
- SafetySuit Hits The Road
- Quick Hits & Clips: Eagles Of Death Metal, Pendulum, Ting Tings, Total Fucking Destruction, Jody Raffoul
- New Releases This Week
- The Raveonettes Stream Third EP On AOL, Announce January Tour Dates
- Absu Announces New Member, Completes New Album
- Iranian Rockers Hypernova Secure Opening Slot On Sisters Of Mercy US Tour
- "Masters Of War" Download To Benefit Voter Registration Non-Profit Headcount

more >

FEATURES

- Interview: Tom Morello: The Nightwatchman
- War Stories Discuss "Hangin' On" Video
- Label Spotlight: Eat Your Heart Out
- The A.K.A.s' Mike Ski Makes Some Noise
- Beat Union Take To The States
- Label Spotlight: Bloodshot Records
- Sleep It Off Not Just A Record Label For Less Than Jake
- Label Spotlight: Equal Vision
- Earth Talk Telecasters, Cars & Sleep Aids
- Boys Like Girls Reach Out To A Larger Audience

more >

MOST POPULAR REVIEWS

- Girl In A Coma - October 4, 2008
- Brian Donahue - "Strangest Love"
- Nick Cave and the Bad Seeds - October 7, 2008
- Carnifex - "The Diseased and the Poisoned"
- Bigelf - "Cheat The Gallows"
- Stove Bredsky - "The Black Ribbon Award"
- 16 Days In China - ""
- Cancer Bats - "Hail Destroyer"
- Bigbang - "From Acid to Zen"
- Darker My Love - "2"

CONTESTS

- Dears: Contest ends November 24!
- Submarines: Contest ends November 21!
- Smiths: Contest ends November 18!
- Hadouken: Contest ends November 11!
- Gossip Girl: Contest ends October 31!
- Down: Contest ends October 31!
- Bob Dylan: Contest ends October 28!
- Projekt Revolution: Contest ends October 27!
- 12 Summers Old: Contest ends October 27!

more >

Live From Las Vegas
Exclusively at the PALMS

Death Cab for Cutie

Download on iTunes

