

Dangerous Toys (MVDV4941) - GRTR

Back in the late '80's Texan band Dangerous Toys delivered a healthy balance of hard rock and sleaze and released 4 albums before splitting up in the late '90's. Imagine a blend of AC/DC, Motley Crue and early Guns n Roses and the resulting sound will give you some idea what to expect from Dangerous Toys.

In 2005 the band reformed for a one-off gig celebrating their 20th anniversary, this took place in their hometown of Austin, and it is hard to believe that the band has not played together for the best part of a decade.

The DVD actually feels like a gig, unlike some live releases the sound is not overly polished and there are no signs of studio overdubbing - this adds to the raw energy of the bands 90 minute set.

The full review can be found here:

http://www.getreadytorock.com/reviews2010/dangerous_toys_dvd.htm

